DEFENSES

Defendant's Alleged Actions Were Not "State Action" For Purposes of Section 1983.

1. Plaintiffs bring their claims pursuant to 42 U.S.C. Sec. 1983, which provides a private right of action for violations of constitutional rights taken "under color of state law."
2. Plaintiffs allege throughout their Complaint that the Defendant acted and incurred liability in his individual capacity, while also alleging, in conclusory fashion, that he acted "under color of state law."
3. The two allegations are fundamentally contradictory, and if the former is true, the latter cannot be.
4. Absent coordinated action among private individuals or entities and state actors, which is only alleged in conclusory fashion, there is no such thing as Section 1983 liability for defendants acting in their individual capacities.
5. If the allegations of the complaint were true, they would constitute a significant departure from the Defendant's duties as a Deputy and Street and Sanitation Worker, and would not constitute state action for purposes of Section 1983.

Defendant's Alleged Actions Were Subject to Qualified Immunity

1. According to the Supreme Court, a government official alleged to have violated a plaintiff's legal or civil rights has qualified immunity from liability for such violations.
2. To assert a defense of qualified immunity in response to an alleged legal or civil rights violation, a defendant must demonstrate that he or she was "performing discretionary functions... insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known."

3. Though the most outrageous and most speculative aspects of the complaint pertaining to defendant might be clearly illegal, acts like filing a police report, even under a mistaken belief, or trying to discover who had possession of the phone and visiting Plaintiff's roommate do not violate any clearly established rules or laws.
4. To that extent, Defendant is immune from civil damages because he was engaged in a discretionary government function that did not violate any "clearly established statutory or constitutional rights."

WHEREFORE, the Defendant, Charles Sikanich prays that this honorable Court deny all requested relief by Plaintiff, and for any additional relief that the Court deems just.

Respectfully Submitted,
